INTRODUCTION.

EDUCATIONAL AND POLITICAL INTERESTS.

The period covered by the following records is filled with the accounts of affairs of vital importance in the growth of the town. During these years were laid in fact the foundation of its coming prestige as an industrial center. The first move, however, was in the direction of forming a system of government satisfactory to all concerned, not only in the progress here but everywhere in the state. In the settlement of this matter discussion followed discussion, and meetings and conventions were of common occurrence.

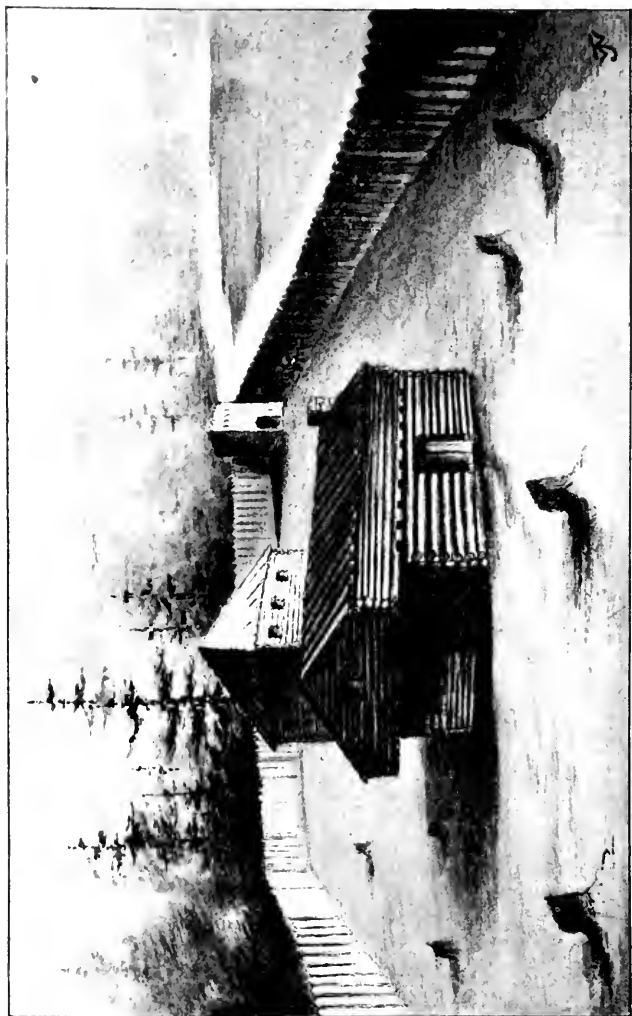

In these controversies Derryfield showed its good judgment by refusing to participate in the arguments to any extent, and finally accepted the "civil constitution of the state of New Hampshire, as presented by the convention at Concord, October 31, 1783," with a decided majority. The first annual election under the new constitution occurred March 1, 1784, and resulted in a majority vote for Josiah Bartlett for president, while General Nichols led in the ballot for state senator. Hon. Mesech Weare was elected to the presidency, being the first executive officer elected by the people of New Hampshire. This constitution was not changed until 1792, when some modifications were made, among others the name of president being altered to governor. Provision was made to have the legislature divide the state into twelve senatorial districts, and that the council be elected from districts by the people, the same as the senators. Derryfield, under this constitution, was classed with Litchfield in the representation to the legislature. At the joint meeting held March 26, 1793, Major John Webster of Derryfield was elected the first representative. September 7 of this year John Stark was elected the first town treasurer, that office having been previously styled "counter." It was voted to hold the meetings in the towns alternately. As long as this arrangement of elections was followed the Derryfield meetings, which came just before the regular town meetings, were held at the barn of Captain Samuel Moor at Goff's Falls, an ox-cart being used for the moderator's desk.

With its representation in the state legislature and Derryfield's broadening history the first action of sufficient moment for our notice was the vote at a special meeting October 30, 1792, "to have the Gore of land called Henrysburgh annexed to the Town." For some reason unexplained in the designation of the town line in the charter a corner of "waste land," situated between the northern boundary of Derryfield and the southwestern limit of Chester, comprising about two square miles in area and most frequently called Harrysborough, had not been included. The settlers on this strip were now receiving the advantages of the roads built without helping to pay for them. The annexation was effected with the agreement of Chester. The following year, 1794, the Hon. Samuel Blodget began to build his canal at the falls, and an era of prosperity seemed to have dawned at last upon the town.

The year 1795 bore the first fruit in the cause of education in the town in the building of a schoolhouse at the falls, near the site of the present house at Amoskeag. It was built by private subscription, and the same year a social library was originated by some of the citizens of Derryfield and Goffstown. In the warrant for the annual election for 1797 the ninth article read: "To see if the town will vote to pay for the schoolhouse which is now Built and to Build two more for the town's use." The result was discouraging to the champions of education at that meeting, but the following year, March 5, 1798, a vote to that effect was carried, and the cause of education may be said to have at last gained a foothold.

*STARK'S FORT.

Captain Goffe's house, standing near the mouth of Cohas Brook, had been used as a place of refuge upon an alarm of Indians. But this was inadequate to afford protection for all who sought safety, and in the summer of 1746 the construction of a larger and more conveniently situated garrison was intrusted to Lieut. Archibald Stark. Accordingly he, assisted by the inhabitants in this vicinity, built what became known as Stark's Fort on the west shore at the outlet of Swager's (corruption of Sebago, meaning place of water), later called Fort Pond, now Nutt's, a large and substantial garrison. This was about one hundred and twenty-five feet square. A well was dug and stoned between the building and the pond, which is still to be seen, though nearly filled with debris. The situation was most favorable to the surrounding inhabitants, some of whom were living about the Falls, others at McMurphy's mills, and at Cohas Brook. No doubt it contributed its share toward the safety of the frontier during that anxious period.—

The following communication directed to Governor Wentworth and copied from Vol. 1, p. 297, of the manuscript collection of correspondence now in the State Secretary's office seems worthy of incorporation here:

To Isace Huse Constable for the town of Derrryfield for the yeair 1788 Greeting

You are Hearby Requiered in the name of the Government of thies State that you warnn all the freehoulders and other signed by himself and others praying for a further supply of soldiers to protect the frontier, says in part:

That ye news of a formidable armament sent from Canada to Crown Point obtained such credits with the Government of ye Massachusetts Bay as induced them to provide a prodigious reinforcement to strengthen their western barrier—That such is our situation that as the rivers Hudson & Connecticut lie most exposed to incursions from Crown Point, so ours is the next, and the experience of this whole war has taught us that whenever any smart attack has been made upon any of the settlements on Connecticut river the enemy have never failed of sending a considerable number to visit our river—That while our ordinary business was hoeing we could work in such large companies as not to be in such imminent danger of being massacred by the enemy, which now haying and English harvest comes on will be impracticable without vast detriment to the whole and utter ruin to some. We therefore beg of your Excelency & Honors to take our deplorable case into consideration.

In the Journal of the House of Representatives Saturday, October 24, 1747, we find it recorded:

Voted That ye Muster Roll of Cap^t John Goffe for four men posted at Blais-dells Perhams & Fosters Garrison near Amoskeag from 30th Aug^t 1746 to ye 23th Sep^t following amounting to twelve Pounds for Prov. & ammunition be
